KEVIN FEDERLINE DINES OUT WITH MARK VINCENT KAPLAN

Beverly Hills, Ca. - Kevin Federline dined out with his divorce attorney, Mark Vincent Kaplan at Mastro's Steakhouse in Beverly Hills, Tuesday evening.

Upon leaving the restaurant Kevin was met and interviewed by EXTRA and E! which will air Wednesday. Life and Style, and the Sun asked questions and Kevin responded to them, while a reporter from People Magazine looked on. They all were interested about what Kevin was up to with his career and treated him with much respect.

This brought an instant smile to Kevin's face, when he was asked his first questions, according to Michael Sands, Spokesman for Mark Vincent Kaplan, the divorce attorney for Kevin Federline.

Questions like, where do you see yourself in a year? Kevin smiled and responded, "Making movies!" Are you comfortable with your new image? Kevin smiled and said, "Yes, I am."

Kevin said, that he was very happy and was moving forward with his career. He also said he had offers on the table that he was considering being involved in but will consider which ones to accept as he spoke to E! and Extra. Kevin mentioned that he is glad to be back in Los Angeles.

He was wearing a fabulous well-stated sport jacket with open collar shirt ... gone were his signature gold chains that he wore around his neck.

Mark Vincent Kaplan, his divorce attorney explained that Kevin is a good person and it is unfortunate that people distort the truth without knowing Kevin. I believe, if you know Kevin as I do, you would think the world of him.

Kevin would like full legal and full physical custody of his sons.

Please submit any questions you may want answered. We will answer as soon as possible.
